DANA-FARBER/BRIGHAM AND WOMEN'S

COURSE OVERVIEW

Clinicians need to stay current in their knowledge of high-risk genetic cancer syndromes and appropriate treatment options. New discoveries of genes that lead to increased cancer risk are occurring quickly, as are the therapies targeting those genes. This half-day course, for medical, radiation, and gynecologic oncologists, gynecologists, OB/GYNs, primary care physicians, and other clinicians involved in women's health, will enhance practitioners' knowledge in this area. Through lecture, case presentations, and Q&A, attendees will learn how to assess and manage risk for breast and gynecologic cancers, as well as understand genetic and lifestyle risk factors. In addition, specialists in the field will provide updates on treatments for breast, ovarian, and endometrial cancers.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this course, attendees will be able to: identify individuals who are at high cancer risk; integrate this knowledge about high-risk familial cancer syndromes into their practice; and utilize new advances in triple negative breast cancer, HER2+ breast cancer, high-risk newly diagnosed endometrial cancer, and recurrent ovarian cancer, and apply this knowledge into direct patient care.

About the Susan F. Smith Center for Women's Cancers at Dana-Farber/Brigham and Women's Cancer Center

The Susan F. Smith Center for Women's Cancers brings together a team of renowned experts in breast and gynecologic cancers to provide women with the most promising cancer treatments available. With an equal commitment to clinical research and care, the faculty is able to facilitate the rapid conversion of scientific discoveries into lifesaving treatments.

In addition to offering the latest treatments, the Center also provides a wide range of specialized treatment programs and other services – from support groups to complementary therapies – to help meet the diverse needs of women facing cancer.

Harvard Medical School (HMS) adheres to all ACCME Essential Areas, Standards, and Policies. It is HMS's policy that those who have influenced the content of a CME activity (e.g. planners, faculty, authors, reviewers and others) disclose all relevant financial relationships with commercial entities so that HMS may identify and resolve any conflicts of interest prior to the activity. These disclosures will be provided in the activity materials along with disclosure of any commercial support received for the activity. Additionally, faculty members have been instructed to disclose any limitations of data and unlabeled or investigational uses of products during their presentations.
